This week's #WSW will take a look at an organization called Earth Science Women's Network (ESWN)!

Earth Science Women's Network (ESWN) was started in 2002 by 6 early career scientists who saw a need for a space that offered virtual career development for women in the geosciences. Just 13 years later ESWN is worldwide with over 2000 members.

“Our ESWN website allows members to connect and create an online community of professional support and encouragement. ESWN is a place to meet other female earth scientists and to provide a forum for discussion on an array of professional and work-related personal issues. Our focus on peer mentoring has provided support for nearly 2000 female scientists.”

Visit <http://eswnonline.org/> to find out how you can join ESWN, collaborate with other women scientists and so much more!

ESWN was featured in the Women in Science Wednesday (#WSW) Facebook post from the Journal of Geophysical Research: Oceans on April 1, 2015.
